The maintenance of your files arranged in a libic system of folders will help, as well as the use of a world consistent to name them, but it could spend hours easily organizing them and ending with a vast and different system to handle that it takes an eternity to navigate. It would be much more easy if I could label everything with a color, as you can in a Mac. In addition, the recently updated security table no longer has the safety brown or safety gray, since ANSI does not consider that they are dangers of colored alerts for accident prevention.
